

DevOps Engineer Job Description

- Responsible for working with development teams to translate scalability, performance, reliability, and functional requirements to virtualized/cloud computing solutions
- Responsible for developing testing strategies and performing tests to reveal viability of cloud deployment solutions
- Responsible for the administration and management of cloud computing clusters
- Required to assist engineer and development teams with the deployment of virtualized software services
- Run and support developer and user access to cloud resources
- Responsible for developing tools to check and report performance and security metrics for virtualized resources
- Take part in development and deployment of agile software and processes
- Render continuing support for the services and applications that are critical to the organization's business needs
- Partake in industry and technical meetings to support business objectives
- Responsible for conveying information on the methods, findings, and hypotheses with stakeholders.