

Political Analyst Job Description

---

- Monitor national political trends as well as House, Senate, and Presidential races
- Responsible for writing political updates daily
- Responsible for generating materials to be used in national and regional political briefings
- Required to provide briefings to regional political staff
- Uphold contact with national party committees
- Research, build, and present intelligence products at the operational level for senior leaders
- Research, analyze, and produce evaluation and briefings on current and anticipated military and foreign policy, security strategy, doctrine, regional relations, and leadership structure
- Stay current on the political and military capabilities and intentions of individuals, groups, and governments within the country/region
- Gather data from various sources, including public opinion surveys, and election results
- Conduct statistical analysis and interpret research findings
- Apply research and historical documents to develop political theories
- Responsible for the forecast of political, economic, and social trends
- Scrutinize current events, policy decisions, and legislation changes that may affect the organization
- Stay up-to-date with international trends and developments.